BOOKING
Year around

Scott Huggins is a Bible teacher, speaker, and lifelong student of Scripture with a passion for helping others discover the depth, relevance, and transformative power of God's Word. His educational background includes studies at East Coast Bible College and Lee University, as well as horticulture and agronomics at Clemson University. Scott also brings 35 years of vocational experience in the green industries. His background in horticulture, agronomics, land stewardship, and practical outdoor work gives him a distinctive perspective on the relationship between Scripture, creation, work, community, and responsible stewardship. Drawing from his biblical studies and professional experience, Scott speaks on subjects such as the Tabernacle of Moses, the encampment of Israel, biblical symbolism, wilderness living, homesteading, and God's design for stewardship, family, and community. His teaching combines scriptural insight, historical and cultural context, and practical application in a clear and engaging way. Whether speaking at churches, conferences, retreats, educational events, or community gatherings, Scott seeks to encourage audiences to deepen their understanding of Scriptures.
